“Pedagogies of Institutional Kairos:
Why the UW English department & TPC program are uniquely situated to respond to AI writing and other paradigm shifts.”

Tuesday, February 7, 2023

3:30 p.m.

Via Zoom (link below)

Contextualized by the recent conversations around ChatGPT and other AI writing tools, in this talk I offer suggestions for building writing programs that respond both proactively and excitedly to interdisciplinary shifts in creating and sharing knowledge. Building on the concept of rhetorical invention as a foundation for programmatic and curricular development, I consider how the specific place-based materiality of the UW English Department affords unique perspectives on writing and learning, both in the academy and in our communities. This talk will provide current teachers, scholars, and students of writing with takeaways for adapting their teaching and their learning to proactively face new challenges and opportunities placed on our academic and professional disciplines.
