“Of Mētis and Cuttlefish: Employing Collective Mētis as a Theoretical Framework for Marginalized Communities”

This presentation describes the theory of collective mētis, which is a new theoretical framework for community-based research in the rhetoric of health medicine (RHM) sub-field within rhetorical studies. Following a brief history of the concept, mētis, I describe the need for this theory. Lastly, I argue that this theory empowers marginalized communities through a case study of a LGBTQ+ community in Central Florida.
